--Thisbe Nissen, author of The Good People of New York
"Written with a heart seared with pain and a pen filled with passion, Brad Land's tale is street-fight brutal and gut-wrench tragic. It is a book that every teenager should read and every parent must read, especially those of us with sons. Goat never lets go. It rips and shreds us with blade-sharp dialogue and a relentless pace, all the while exposing the bravest of souls and the most gentle of hearts."

Brad Land: Goat: A Memoir
Author Brad Land – the assassin of language who wrote Goat: A Memoir – apparently suckled at the teat of Cormac et al, and the reading public is the poorer for it. Again, I was feverish with anticipation when I read assorted reviews (all glowing) of Goat, most of which hailed a new voice in American letters.

Brad Land is 19 years old and wants to go to college and continue living as much of a normal life as he possibly can. One thing he really desires is "fitting in" or more importantly, being accepted by others. Another thing he deeply desires is to be loved by those around him.
